

Resource Guide of Summer Opportunities for ALANA Undergraduate Students
2009

Monday, January 26, 2009

Greetings,

Thank you for seeking out the 8th annual edition of the Resource Guide of Summer Opportunities for ALANA Undergraduate Students, a resource guide including internships, research opportunities and leadership development programs geared towards ALANA (acronym for African American, Latino/a, Asian American and Native American individuals) undergraduates. As in previous editions, this guide, hosted and available for download at www.doorsofopportunity.org. Furthermore, this edition is not comprehensive and includes only those programs whose deadlines have not passed at time of publication.

Every year, when I update this document, the last piece of the project is the letter. Writing the letter provides a moment to reflect on why this resource guide is important for me and why it matters. Typically, I have a minor moment of inspiration and find something witty, insightful and/or useful to put in this space. This year, I found myself at a loss. For the few of you reading this who know me, you know that I will sometimes do everything in my power to not ask for help, even when I sorely need it. With the resource guide this year, I did what I had resisted for so many years – I humbly, but hesitantly asked for help.

And help came! Without the contributions of e-volunteers JohnPaul Makilya, Richard Nere and Courtland Kouassiaman, who worked on updating program information, this would not have come together. To them and to the many others who provided offers of help and encouraging emails, I am grateful. Thank you so much! So, my miniscule nugget of wisdom for 2009 is to be genuinely thankful and to thank others whenever it is possible.

Thank you to all those who responded to the call for e-volunteers. Thank you to all of the program coordinators, directors and managers whose opportunities are represented here – for your commitment to supporting and opening doors for ALANA students. Thank you to those of you who exclaim “I know someone who might benefit from this!” and forward this document along. Thank you to programs like the Everett Public Service Internship Program which supported students interested and committed to public service for 18 years, until it was no longer able to do so.

Now that I am [slowly] reforming my resistance to asking for help, I’m opening the doors a little wider. I want to see this resource guide grow and develop and reach more people. I want to make the website more dynamic, to tell the stories of people who’ve gone on to do amazing and interesting things since taking advantage of these summer opportunities, to do more for high school students (and the list goes on...)! So, I’m asking for more help. Ideas, Volunteers, Writers, Web Designers, Career/Pre-Professional Advisors....people willing to help build a vision and a plan for an improved resource guide and improved website. I look forward to hearing from you.

Enjoy this year’s resource guide – and as always, please pass it along to someone else who might benefit.

THANK YOU!

Caroline

Bosson Caroline Malee Kouassiaman (doorsofopportunity@yahoo.com)

P.S. I would like to extend special recognition to my mother, who as always, designed the cover and provided her moral support to me throughout this project as well as Katherine Weathers, who graciously provided last-minute pagination help!

Location

Washington, D.C.

Dates

June – mid-August, 2009 (10 weeks)

Eligibility Criteria

- Be enrolled in an academic program, as an undergraduate student, at the time of application
- Minority undergraduate with a serious interest in science writing
- Preference given to those students pursuing a degree in journalism

Description

This internship program is for students interested in pursuing careers in science journalism. Students intern at the "headquarters of AAAS's Science magazine, the largest interdisciplinary journal in the world, under the guidance of award-winning reporters and editors, and have a chance to experience what science writers do for a living. Interns will be expected to contribute to the weekly news section, including bylined articles in the print and electronic news service." For testimonies from interns from 2005, 2006, 2007 and 2008, see website indicated above.

Location

Various. You will select up to four Breakthrough programs from 29 sites around the country in 16 states, and in Hong Kong.

Dates

Summer 2009 – Six Weeks

Eligibility Criteria

- First-year, Sophomore, Junior, or Senior college student currently enrolled in an undergraduate degree program with less than 5 years full time professional experience.
- Be between the ages of 15 and 23.
- Must be authorized to work in the US, if not one must possess work authorization

Description

“Founded in 1978 as Summerbridge, the Breakthrough Collaborative is a national educational enrichment program that annually prepares thousands of motivated, low-income middle school students for success in rigorous college preparatory programs. Drawn from the public school system, 92% of our students are students of color. English is a second language for 34% of our students, and most would be the first in their family to attend college.” As a pre-professional teaching experience, this program enables college students to obtain first-hand experience in education, and to act as role models, educators and mentors. As teachers in this program, college students teach core academic classes as well as electives, non-academic courses and “mini-courses”, which they have the ability to develop and design. The program’s ideal interns are “bright, passionate, creative and intrigued by learning and teaching—even if they are not necessarily planning to become teachers.”

Housing/Room & Board

If the site is an out-of-town site, a homestay may be arranged. Please state your housing needs on your application.

Stipend/Salary/Other?

Eligibility Criteria

- The City Hall Fellows program is designed primarily for recent college graduates who have not began graduate school.
- City Hall Fellows will accept applications from persons who earned a bachelor's degree in 2007 or after.
- Applicants need not have earned their bachelor's degree before applying, but must earn a bachelor's degree from an accredited institution prior to the fellowship start date – August 3, 2009. Students from all majors and academic disciplines will be considered and are encouraged to apply.

Description

The City Hall Fellows program will offer a cohort of talented future leaders an opportunity to gain hands-on experience in local government. The program is designed for recent college graduates who have not yet attended graduate school and is a one – year experience that will take place in two sites – San Francisco and Houston. The program will consist of two main components. One is the work placement where Fellows work as full-time staffers and support the ongoing work in the office of a senior-level city official. The second component is the Civic Leadership Development Program, a series of sessions and learning experiences, which teach Fellows about how cities and local governments function and the role of citizen involvement, thus reinforcing and complementing the experiential learning acquired through the work placement.

Description

This program enables students to design and complete their own research projects, in consultation with other participants and scientists, in a number of areas related to Ecology. The descriptions of all summer 2009 programs are available at http://www.ecostudies.org/reu\_project\_desc.html. The program has three main components: (1) Student Research Projects, (2) Research Strategies for the Undergraduate, and (3) Research in Context. Participants present in the annual Undergraduate Research Symposium, write a paper for a peer-reviewed journal and attend seminars and meetings for further research training and reflection on the process. Overall, through a case study of a regional environmental issue, a career forum, and a day spent teaching high school students from a nearby city, students explore the social, political, intellectual and personal dimensions of being an ecologist.

Four Directions Summer Research Program (FDSRP)

Sponsor

Harvard Medical School, Brigham and Women's Hospital

Website

<http://www.fdsrp.org/>

Location

Boston, MASSACHUSETTS

Dates

June 14th – August 8th, 2009

Eligibility Criteria

- Undergraduate Native Americans with a demonstrated interest in careers in medical sciences.
- Minimum 1 year of undergraduate studies completed prior to start of program (June 2009).
- NOT taking the August MCAT (the time constraints of the program do not allow adequate time for studying for this important exam).
- No previous research experience required, although one semester class of introductory science class (can include biology or chemistry) is required.

Description

Native Americans remain the most significantly underrepresented in graduate and medical education. The Four Directions Summer Research Program aims to address this disparity by choosing 10 participants each summer for an intensive medical program. This involves individualized research projects with faculty mentors (covering a wide range of interests), as well as further opportunities to explore the fields of medicine and biomedical research such as shadowing opportunities, shifts in the emergency room and first-hand operating room experience. In addition, extracurricular activities and trips are planned for program participants. Participants tend to come to the program with varied levels of research experience and differences in interest, so attempts are made by the sponsor to accommodate everyone. The mission of this project is: "to find motivated Native people and encourage them to contribute their unique talents to providing care to our people, individually through medicine, or broadly through science. Simply stated, we are Indians helping Indians."

Eligibility Criteria

- College sophomores, juniors, and seniors enrolled in any U.S. college or university, although preference may be granted to current sophomores and juniors (students who will be continuing with undergraduate studies after the program)
- “Because the study of social policy benefits from a diversity of perspectives, the program particularly encourages students from minority groups underrepresented in graduate education— including those who identify as African-American, Mexican-American, Native American, or Puerto Rican—and students from low income families to apply”

Description

The purpose of this program is to introduce talented undergraduates to doctoral and career opportunities in the fields related to inequality and social policy. During this five-day program, students attend a series of seminars, workshops, panel discussions, off-site field trips and collaborative activities led by program faculty, doctoral fellows, and other social policy experts and practitioners. Faculty and doctoral fellows are drawn from a wide range of fields including Sociology, Political Economy & Government, Economics and Public Policy. Students are engaged in a short graduate-school type seminar and are encouraged to engage each other and the facilitators in dialogues about issues related to social policy and inequality, assisted by short response papers to background readings provided by the institute.

Eligibility Criteria

- Multi-ethnic students who have completed their undergraduate education by the start of the program (graduating seniors are eligible for this). The program is not limited to minority students: every application is reviewed on an individual basis. US citizens or permanent residents

Description

The Greenlining Academy focuses on providing hands-on experience in public policy specifically impacting low-income and minority communities, and includes two programs:

SUMMER ASSOCIATES: "The Academy Summer Associates Program is an intensive, ten-week leadership training program for multi-ethnic graduate level students who want experience working on low-income and minority economic development issues as policy analysts, advocates and community organizers." Each participant manages or co-manages a research or advocacy project with the guidance of the Academy Director or a Program Manager. In addition, Associates attend leadership skills workshops, power lunch series, field visits; in addition to completing an oral presentation of their work at the end of the summer.

ACADEMY FELLOWSHIP: "The Academy Fellowship Program is an annual leadership training program for multi-ethnic students who have at minimum completed their undergraduate studies and want experience working on low-income and minority economic development." Fellows work on individual project areas, under the direction of the Program Managers and Greenlining Institute Academy Director. Fellows work on one of the Institute's program areas, conduct research; help to organize community events; interact with members of the multi-ethnic community, corporate and government leaders; write reports, articles, and position papers; and represent the Institute in public media. Fellows also attend power lunch series, leadership skills workshops and field site visits. Overall, the Academy is distinct in that it "is designed to give students hands-on opportunities to manage research, community education and advocacy projects."

Institute for International Public Policy (IIPP) Fellowship Program

Sponsor

United Negro College Fund Special Programs (UNCFSP)

Website

<http://www.uncfsp.org/spknowledge/default.aspx?page=program.view&areaid=2&prog=y&typeid=iipp&type=ABUT>

Dates/Locations

Various.

Eligibility Criteria

- Sophomore student, enrolled full-time at four-year (baccalaureate) institution.
- Minimum 3.2 GPA (on 4.0-scale); Strong interest and plans for graduate study in international affairs
- U.S. citizen or permanent resident (documentation required); Underrepresented minority defined as African American, Hispanic/Latino American, American Indian, Asian American, Alaskan Native, Native Hawaiian, or Pacific Islander

Description

Students are recruited from across the nation and apply as sophomores to participate in a five-year sequence of summer policy institutes, study abroad, intensive language training, internships, and graduate study.

Part I: Sophomore Summer Policy Institute (SSPI) at Spelman College: 8 week program with coursework in International Politics, Research Methods, U.S. Foreign Policy, International Business, Economics, and selected area studies, supplemented by a "writing across the curriculum" component to strengthen and development IIPP Fellows' writing and analytical skills.

Part II: Junior Year Study abroad: Fellows study for 1-2 semesters at an approved overseas institution. The IIPP provides funding for as much as one-half of the total cost of study abroad, with the unmet half being covered by a combination of government and institutional aid, as well as some reasonable family contribution.

Part III: Summer Language Institute: Intensive summer language-training after senior year for those without language competency. Fellows are strongly encouraged to take up less commonly studied languages. Fellows attend summer language programs such as Middlebury College's SLI. IIPP covers the costs of travel to and from the SLI, tuition, room and board, and a modest stipend (or alternative summer language program)

Part IV: Fellows attend the Junior Summer Policy Institute (JSPi) at the University of Maryland during the summer after the junior year, intended to prepare students for graduate study/work in international affairs.

Part V: Fellows who have established language competency participate in a summer internship experience in lieu of intensive language training during the summer following the senior year. For some who opt to defer graduate school for one year, the internship may span the fall and spring semesters as well, providing valuable job experience that strengthens graduate school applications and bolsters professional credentials. IIPP provides a modest cost of living stipend.

Part VI: Fellows who successfully complete each component of their respective fellowship sequences are eligible to receive graduate fellowship assistance for a master's degree in an international affairs-related field. Institutional members of the Association of Professional Schools of International Affairs (APSIA), as partners in the IIPP effort, provide matching fellowship support as available.

Description

Washington Program: This program offers students the opportunity to complete an internship while taking rigorous courses at Georgetown University, including seminars in Economics, Political Science and Public Policy. In the first summer, this coursework is participants' primary responsibilities outside of their internships. Previous internship placements have included, to name a few, Brooking Institute, BET (Black Entertainment Television), Institute of World Politics, World Bank Institute, National Center for Neighborhood Enterprise (comprehensive list on the website). During the second summer, students complete another internship but also provide mentorship with the latest cohort of Institute students and work on their professional development.

Financial Services Program: In this program, students complete full-time internships at the headquarters of KPMG, ranked among the top 100 companies to work for by Fortune Magazine, and ranked 37th among large-size companies. Students selected for this opportunity work at the company's headquarters for eight weeks. For summer 2008, participants will be placed in departments of Audit, Tax, or Advisory Services and paired with a high-level executive to work with for the summer. In addition to their internship, they participate in topical seminars led by guest speakers on various themes related to citizenship and professionalism. Furthermore, partner firms reward exemplary performance by inviting students to return for a second summer, with the possibly of a full-time employment offer following graduation.

Housing/ Room & Board?

Eligibility Criteria

- U.S. citizens who are graduating seniors (or in graduate or professional programs)
- members of JACL
- Preference for applicants who have demonstrated commitment to Asian American issues, particularly those affecting the Japanese American community
- Strong communication skills, especially writing

Description

This program, geared towards graduating seniors and graduate students, places students in the office of members of Congress in the U.S. House of Representatives or the U.S. Senate. Fellows perform a variety of tasks, including legislative duties as well as office tasks: fellows gain substantial exposure to the work of the Representative or Senator and his/her staffs. Overall, the goal of this program is to prepare young leaders for careers in public service. This fellowship was established in honor of Mike M. Masaoka (1915-1991) who spent his life working in the public sector to promote justice and civil rights and who “worked tirelessly to advance the cause of Japanese Americans through crucial times, when supporters were few and financing was scarce.”

- An Eskimo, Aleut, or other Alaska Native;
- A permanent U.S. resident who is a member of the First Nations of Canada.

\*** Applicants must submit copies of relevant enrollment forms or descent documentation. Applicants who are members of the First Nations of Canada must submit proof of U.S. permanent residency."*

Description

This program provides Native American and Alaskan Native students "an insider's view of the federal government" through full-time work in congressional offices, fulfilling a variety of tasks, attending government hearings and votes in the House and Senate, attending lectures and special meetings, etc. Students are also given a chance to network and meet important decision-makers. Placements require varied tasks including those of general support staff as well as specialized tasks such as research and project writing. In addition, at the end of the internship, students prepare and present individual research projects on issues affecting individual tribes, the federal trust responsibility, tribal sovereignty or an issue with broader implications for tribal public policy. Overall, "this program will provide people of Native American ancestry with practical experiences in the legislative process, congressional matters, and governmental proceedings."

Dates

June – August 2009 (10-12 weeks total)

Eligibility Criteria

- Be enrolled in U.S. colleges or universities.
- Be U.S. citizens or permanent residents of the United States.
- Have completed at least one year of undergraduate study; have academic interests in physical or natural science, mathematics, engineering or marine policy
- Minority groups included for consideration in this particular program include African-American; Asian American; Chicano, Mexican-American, Puerto Rican or other Hispanic; Native American, Alaska Natives and Native Hawaiians

Description

Fellowships are awarded to minority students who have completed at least two semesters of undergraduate study and are interested in the marine sciences, oceanographic engineering, or marine policy. Through this program, WHOI's aim is to provide students from minority groups with a first-hand introduction to cutting-edge research in oceanography, oceanographic engineering, or marine policy. The Minority Fellowship program provides a learning opportunity through involvement in ongoing oceanographic research. Each Minority Fellow pursues an independent research project under the guidance of a member of the research staff in participating departments including Applied Ocean Physics & Engineering, Biology, Geology & Geophysics, Chemistry & Geochemistry and Physical Oceanography. In addition to their research projects, Fellows attend Summer Lecture Series and Ethics in Science Workshop and are encouraged to engage in other ongoing events and activities at WHOI to learn about various facets of marine science.

<http://ailc-inc.org/PLSI.htm>

Location

Albuquerque, NEW MEXICO

Dates

May 29th – July 24th, 2009 (including the orientation)

Eligibility Criteria

- American Indian and Alaskan prospective law students – must be able to demonstrate application to at least one ABA-accredited law school, and submit LSDAS Master Law School Report (the sheet with your undergraduate grade summary), and a copy of LSAT Candidate Report along with applications
- Must submit “Proof of membership in a state- or federally-recognized tribe. If you are not enrolled, but have a blood quantum of ¼ or more, please provide that documentation, along with an explanation of why you are not enrolled.”

NB: Applicant should carefully review the “Who Should Attend” section: <http://lawschool.unm.edu/ailc/plsi/who-should-attend.php>

Description

This program is “an intensive two-month program which prepares American Indian and Alaska Native individuals for the rigors of law school by essentially replicating the first semester of law school. Likened to boot camp by many former participants, the PLSI concentrates its content into eight weeks of instruction, research and study, teaching students the unique methods of law school research, analysis, and writing.” Specifically, the program is a significant academic commitment as “the course load consists of three substantive law courses, including Indian Law, Torts/Legal Process and one other core curriculum subject which varies from year to year. Participants also will be enrolled in an advocacy course in which they will prepare a complete moot appellate court case including the writing of legal memoranda and briefs, and presenting an oral argument at the end of the two months.”

Housing/ Room & Board?

Not provided by sponsor – see information below.

Stipend/Salary/Other

Admitted students receive scholarships but PLSI does not have enough funds to cover everyone’s costs. After deducting the scholarship, the net costs of attending PLSI is about $2,743 (not including transportation to/from outside Albuquerque). Eligibility Criteria

- Minority students who are rising juniors, seniors or recent graduates
- Cumulative GPA of 2.7 (on a 4.0 scale) or higher
- Major/minor in biology, chemistry, computer science, engineering, math or any health-related science
- Must be eligible to work in the U.S.
- Interest in pursuing a career in “public health, with a particular focus on biostatistics, epidemiology and occupational safety and health”

Description

This internship program gives qualified students the ability to acquire public health training in the fields of biostatistics, epidemiology or occupational safety and health, by working directly with CDC (Center for Disease Control and Prevention) researchers. In the beginning of the program, students participate in a two-week training session that covers a variety of topics related to these fields. The remainder of the program consists of internships at these departments, where students gain experience in “the processing, analyzing, and presenting the results of the data analysis through the study of existing data sets from various centers, institutes, and offices of CDC”, in addition to receiving computer-based training. The overall objective of this program is to increase the number of minority health experts, particularly in these three areas (biostatistics, epidemiology and occupational safety and health) to better serve and provide information to minority communities.

Note: "A letter of reference from a nominating faculty member will also be given serious weight in our selection decisions."

Description

This REU program hosts ten undergraduates for 2 intensive months, introducing them to careers in social science through an intense academic program focusing on demography—the scientific study of human populations. This program encompasses a 5-week upper division sociology course, worth 3 credit hours, on the methods and materials of demographic research. The course focuses on research dealing with minority group experiences in the United States and teaches students how to answer questions on such topics as racial/ethnic inequality, health disparities, fertility differentials, etc. using demographic research tools. In addition to the 5-week course, REU students will be introduced to statistical computing and research ethics at the UT Population Research Center. Students also develop their own research projects, in collaboration with Center faculty members, and produce a scholarly paper on a topic of his/her choosing, which will be later be presented at a regional demographic conference in the fall semester following the REU summer. Students selected into this program will be expected to attend, and will be reimbursed for, their participation in the annual fall Southern Demographic Association conference.

Eligibility Criteria

Note: The SEASSI language program itself is not limited to individuals of Hmong, Cambodian, Filipino, and Lao heritage, but the Heritage Program and the Heritage Language Awards are.

- For the Heritage Program and Heritage Language Fellowship, students must be American undergraduates who are Hmong-American, Lao-American, Vietnamese-American, Filipino-American or Cambodian-American, and who are dedicated to learning the languages of their heritage.
- Commitment to a career related to Southeast Asia and involving the use of the language studied

Description

This program is an intensive summer language institute for those who wish to study Southeast Asian languages, including Hmong, Khmer, Vietnamese, Filipino and Lao. This particular program is focused on assisting students who are in learning the language of their heritage. According to the sponsors, "One of the most important tools you're going to need in order to take such a look at your culture is literacy in your native language. Therefore, that's what you'll spend most of your time on in class in our program. Our instructors, with the sophistication and global perspective you'd expect in a university environment, will help you learn to use basic tools like literacy to function in the traditional (and changing) world of your culture. We'll help you answer your own questions about your culture, and plot your own path, so that you can better understand where you come from, where you're going, and how to best get there." Because only five fellowships can be awarded through this heritage fellowship program, applicants are urged to also apply for FLAS and Tuition fellowships (see website for more information). The languages taught at SEASSI include Thai, Burmese, Javanese and Indonesian in addition to Khmer, Filipino, Hmong, Lao and Vietnamese.

Housing

Location

Los Angeles, CALIFORNIA

Dates

June 21st – August 15th, 2009

Eligibility Criteria

- Rising juniors, rising seniors, and students who have just completed a B.A. (degree in any field) AND have not yet begun first year of a graduate school program by the start of the program
- Should plan to pursue graduate study in the Humanities or Humanistic Social Sciences (english, history, art history, political science)
- Applicants wanting to pursue law school, medical school, psychology, sciences, or any other professional school or discipline are not eligible
- Students attending HBCUs are welcome to apply

Description

This program, primarily targeted to students from Historically Black Colleges and Universities (HBCUs) and toward other historically underrepresented students, is 8-week training on humanities work at the graduate level. Summer Humanities Institute has several components, including interactive seminars on humanistic scholarship, developing and presenting on an in-depth research paper, skills-building workshops to improve preparatory competencies and one-on-one faculty mentoring. Students are assigned mentors by the project who support and guide student-selected research projects.

Summer Internships in Science and Technology (SIST)

Sponsor

Fermi National Accelerator Laboratory; Office of Science/U.S. Department of Energy

Website

<http://sist.fnal.gov/students.php>

Location

Batavia, ILLINOIS

Dates

May 19th – August 6th, 2009

Eligibility Criteria

- Currently enrolled at a 4-year U.S. college or university; a solid academic record (we look for "B's" or better)
- Have completed at least your first year and will have sophomore standing at your institution by start of program
- Major in physics, electrical engineering, mechanical engineering or computer science
- "A strong preference is given to applicants of Native American, Hispanic or African American ethnicities"
- U.S. citizen, permanent residents or foreign nationals authorized with OPT I-20

Note: In order to apply, a student must be first nominated by a faculty member at his or her college or university. See program website for details.

Description

This program offers qualified students laboratory experiences in the fields of science and technology. Also, it potentially provides career placement for post-graduation career opportunities. The interns work with Fermilab staff members assisting with some engineering, scientific or computer work to "carry out experiments, to improve the operation of the particle accelerator or to support and develop specialized research, appropriate to his/her interests and academic level". In addition to individual work assignments, students attend an academic lecture series and complete a final report that they orally present to the Fermilab staff and submit to the Laboratory in written form. Overall, students are selected to help develop "a fuller understanding of the fundamental properties of matter", and to further be exposed to the range of career opportunities available in the sciences.

Housing/ Room & Board?

Sponsor provides partially subsidized furnished housing. (see website indicated below for more details.)

Stipend/Salary/Other

There are different compensation amounts for class levels (ranging from taxable $615-$725/week). Sponsor also provides transportation. See <http://sist.fnal.gov/applicants/details.html> for details on all of the benefits of this program.

Dates

June 1st – August 7th, 2009

Eligibility Criteria

Applicants must be:

- “Members of racial/ethnic groups severely underrepresented in science, math and engineering (African-American, Hispanic/Latino, American Indian/Alaska Native), OR first-generation college students who are economically disadvantaged according to federal guidelines
- Have completed their sophomore year of undergraduate study (the equivalent of 60 semester credit hours) by June 2009, and may not have received a bachelor’s degree or plan to receive one before December 2009
- Have sufficient credits in the academic areas to which they apply”
- U.S. citizen or permanent residents

Description

Student conduct individual research projects in all areas of science, math and engineering. There are 18 areas available for student research, including: Aerospace Engineering; Applied Mathematics; Astrophysical and Planetary Sciences; Behavioral Genetics; Biology – Ecology and Evolutionary; Biology – Molecular, Cellular and Developmental; Chemical and Biological Engineering; Chemistry and Biochemistry; Civil, Environmental and Architectural Engineering; Computer Science; Electrical and Computer Engineering; Geological Sciences; Integrative Physiology; Mathematics; Mechanical Engineering; Neuroscience and Physics. With their faculty mentors, students design, carry out, and formally present research projects in their area of interest. Participants work either as part of a research team or independently. SMART interns earn three (3) hours of upper-division undergraduate credit in independent study by carrying out their projects and participating in workshops designed to enhance their research experience and strengthen their preparation for graduate school.

- Interest in pursuing graduate studies in public health
- Carry own health insurance throughout the duration of the summer program

Description

This program “is a relatively intensive 4-week program, during which qualified participants receive an interesting and enjoyable introduction to biostatistics and public health research. This program is designed to expose undergraduate minorities to the use of quantitative methods for biological, environmental and medical research.” Participants attend non-credit introductory biostatistics and Stata (statistical program) courses, as well as an Introduction to Epidemiology & Health and Social Behavior class, in addition to attending several afternoon seminars, led by the School of Public Health's faculty. The purpose of these seminars is to introduce students to the many ways in which biostatistics is relevant and useful for health-related topics and studies. Students also attend an all-day workshop on health disparities. Students also attend an all-day workshop on health disparities in engage in research activities with groups of other participants and graduate students.

Location

Chicago, ILLINOIS

Dates

Summer 2009 - 8 weeks total (35 hours/week). Usually starts in mid-June.

Eligibility Criteria

- "Eligible are American citizens and lawful permanent residents including, but not limited to, persons who are African American, Hispanic/Latino, Native American, or Puerto Rican as well as individuals who will add diversity to the field of law and social science"
- Current sophomores and juniors (i.e. students who have completed at least the sophomore year and who have not received a bachelor's degree by the time the fellowship begins.)
- Minimum 3.0 GPA (on a 4.0 scale) and working towards an academic major in the social sciences or humanities

Description

This fellowship program allows undergraduates interested in pursuing graduate education in the social sciences the opportunity to learn about research-oriented careers in law and social sciences first hand. Students work 35 hours a week at the American Bar Foundation, a "non-profit research institute dedicated to the study of law, legal institutions, and legal processes". Students are assigned to work with American Bar Research Fellows, many of whom hold joint appointments at local universities. Current research interests of the Fellows include topics as diverse as "professionalism and the transformation of the legal profession in the United States and abroad, the dynamics of employment discrimination disputes, the impact of civil rights law on the economic progress of minorities, jury decision making, public interest lawyering and social reform, historical analyses of labor, group libel, and regulatory law, and the role of law in racial relations, postcolonial settings, and globalization". Participants also participate in field visits and seminars to learn about career options in the fields of law and social science.

Eligibility Criteria

- Be in good academic standing with a minimum GPA of a 3.0
- Currently enrolled in an accredited public or private college or university in the U.S. or its territories
- Have completed at least two semesters and have at least one semester remaining of undergraduate studies by the beginning of the program
- Interest in and potential for graduate study
- Documented U.S. citizenship or permanent resident status

Note: "The SR-EIP is not designed for students pursuing professional training in the practice of law, business administration, clinical medicine, clinical psychology or the allied health professions."

Description

This program was created to encourage students from groups traditionally underrepresented in the sciences, social sciences and humanities to consider research careers in the academic, public or private sectors. This program offers undergraduates the opportunity to work for eight to ten weeks with a faculty or research mentor at a participating Alliance institution (see list of participating institutions above). Participants gain experience and knowledge in academic research through this one-on-one collaboration. At the end of the experience, students present a written report and/or abstract and are expected to participate in the Leadership Alliance's annual symposium to present the results of their research. Students can select up to three institutions for consideration.

Note: With one application, students can apply to up to 3 sites.

- Interest in pursuing career in biomedical sciences
- Students who are underrepresented in the fields of biomedical sciences, including but not limited to: African-American, Hispanic or Latino-American, American Indian, Alaskan Native, and Pacific Islander, as well as disabled persons and members of economically disadvantaged families.

Description

This program gives minority undergraduates the opportunity to do biomedical science research, under the supervision of a faculty mentor in several areas: biochemistry, biotechnology, cell biology, developmental biology, genetics, immunology, microbiology, molecular biology, neuroscience, pathogenesis, physiology, public health, and virology. In addition to the individual faculty mentorship component, small group meetings are scheduled for every two weeks, when students meet with a faculty facilitator to discuss and review each other's work, receive feedback and learn about the research projects concurrently being conducted in other fields and laboratories. Furthermore, students attend workshops on applying to graduate and/or medical school and participate in fieldtrips to local companies, research seminars and various social events.

- Be entering junior or senior year in home institution after completion of the program
- Must be U.S. citizen or permanent resident

Description

During this program, participating students participate in problem seminars in mathematics, statistics, or computer science. Altogether, the program will also include a technical writing seminar, a GRE preparation workshop, and two short courses on algebra and real analysis, and colloquium talks given by well know mathematical scientists. In addition, panel discussions allow for an exchange of ideas and for the presentation of information on graduate school and further opportunities in the mathematical sciences. Through the many components, it strives to better prepare these students for graduate studies by giving them important writing, research, group work and presentation skills, as well as preparation for the GRE and the graduate school application. Interested applicants can download copies of the journal of previous SUMSRI research papers, from 1999-2008 at <http://www.users.muohio.edu/porterbm/sumj/Journal.html>

Summer Undergraduate Research Fellowships in Chemistry (SURF)

Sponsor

University of California, Santa Cruz

Website

<http://www.chemistry.ucsc.edu/projects/surf/index.html>

Location

Santa Cruz, CALIFORNIA

Dates

June 22nd – August 28th, 2009

Eligibility Criteria

- U.S. citizens or permanent residents of U.S. and its possessions
- Must be full-time chemistry or biochemistry undergraduates who will have completed their junior year, but will not have graduated as a senior before the program begins
- “Applications from women, ethnic minorities and persons with disabilities are actively encouraged.”
- Also welcome are applications from students who attend institutions with limited opportunities for research involvement.

Description

This program enables qualified students to undertake research projects (with small groups) under faculty supervision. The labs of the participating faculty cover all of the major areas of Chemistry, including: Biochemistry, Bioinorganic, Inorganic, Organic & Bioorganic, Physical & Physical Biochemistry (see indicated website for complete description of current research topics). Students first learn about the topic and then learn the techniques and strategies for researching and analyzing this topic. Student research findings are often published in research journals. In addition to working with peers and faculty members, students also have the opportunity to interact with post-doctoral fellows and graduate students.

Housing/ Room & Board?

Housing provided by sponsor.

Stipend/Salary/Other

$3,750 stipend + transport to and from the program

Summer Venture in Management Program (SVMP)

Sponsor

Harvard University School of Business

Website

<http://www.hbs.edu/mba/svmp/index.html>

Location

Cambridge, MASSACHUSETTS

Dates

June 20th – 26th, 2009

Eligibility Criteria

- must be current college student who will complete junior year in college by June 2009
- must be U.S. citizen or permanent resident
- business major not required
- SVMP participants must be employed in a summer internship for summer 2009 and be nominated by and have sponsorship from their company or organization to attend. Sponsoring organizations can include public or private companies, government agencies or entities, and non-profit organizations."
- "Consistent with the objective of promoting educational diversity and opportunity in business leadership, additional criteria to be considered among others, are whether the applicant is: the first family member to attend college; a member of a group that is currently underrepresented in business schools and corporate America (e.g. African American, Latino, Native American, Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual, or Transgender); and/or from a family with little business education or experience; from a school whose graduates do not typically attend a top-tier university (e.g., attends a predominantly minority college, or attends a community college as part of a four-year degree)."

Description

SVMP is a twenty-year traditional sponsored by Harvard Business School (HBS). It consists of a 1-week program "designed to expose high-potential college students, who may not have otherwise considered an MBA degree, to the study of business administration in general, and to the MBA Program at HBS in particular. This unique educational experience, which combines a week of study at HBS with a summer internship at a company or organization, gives participants a broader understanding of the challenges business leaders face, the innumerable opportunities that exist in business, and the impact they can have on their community and the world through business leadership." During SVMP, students are exposed to the typical experience of HBS MBA students and receive first-hand experience in the case method to learn about and discuss issues in management.

Housing/ Room & Board?

Housing, meals, tuition provided during the week.

Stipend/Salary/Other

HBS covers all educational expenses, including room and board during the SWMP week, while the sponsors cover your salary during the week and assume the costs of transportation to and from the program. Participants will need to arrange the logistics of getting to and from Boston.

- Be a citizen of the United States or permanent resident of the National of the Trust Territory of the Pacific Island or Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands, or a lawful permanent resident of the United States, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands or Guam"

Description

All of these three programs possess a core curriculum, made up of two components – Academic Study Strategy Development and Field Experience. These are then adapted for each program, such that:

- ESP I is for college students who have completed general biology and chemistry and are at least 2 years away from applying to veterinary school. Students here obtain a greater understanding of the field through "Animal Exposure" and coursework in basic science.
- ESP II is for students who plan to apply to veterinary school within the next academic year and want to learn more about careers in the profession. It includes workshops on veterinary medical school applications/admissions and MCAT/GRE prep sessions.
- ESP III is designed for "current applicants for a professional veterinary medicine program and students who have been accepted" and incorporates a Simulated Veterinary Curriculum.

Note: ESP II and III participants also complete a course in "Comparative Veterinary Physiology" and experience "Veterinary Clinical Exposure".
